

Sources: Environmental Protection Agency, state health departments

Radioactive particles from Japan detected in U.S.

Trace amounts of radioactive particles consistent with the damaged Japanese nuclear reactors have been detected in several U.S. states but currently pose no health risk, according to the EPA and state officials.