

FAIREWINDS ASSOCIATES

Home Fukushima Updates Who We Are Reports Multimedia In the News

In The News

Radiation Exposure Could Curtail Workers' Efforts

Henry Fountain, New York Times, 2011-03-14

As radiation levels rise at the crippled reactors in northern Japan, a basic question arises: how long can. read more...

Nuclear expert: "50-50 chance of a catastrophic radiation" from Jap

What you should know about the health risks from Japan's nuclear accident, from an ir read more...
David Case, Global Post , 2011-03-14

The nuclear disaster at Fukushima, Japan is continuing to deteriorate. Multiple explosions have blown r buildings, and a dire struggle is under way to prevent the worst.

For several days, authorities have attempted to reassure the public. Now, they are...

read more...

Blowing the whistle on Vermont Yankee

Terri Hallenbeck, The Burlington Free Press, 2010-04-28

Arnie and Maggie Gundersen came to the Statehouse last week hauling a poster-si Yankee nuclear power plant and the monitoring wells that dot the grounds.

Sitting before a legislative committee, Arnie Gundersen recounted the tritium levels read more...

NRC: States have considerable say on decommissioning issues

SUSAN SMALLHEER , Times Argus, 2010-04-28

Officials from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Thursday that states have a lot of control over th power plants, but that radiological issues remain the federal domain. Tom Frederick, speaking at a meeti nuclear power...

read more...

Has Trust Leaked Away With the Tritium?

MATTHEW L. WALD, New York Times, 2010-04-21

A panel of experts convened on Tuesday by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to approach tritium leaks at reactors suggested that the biggest risk that nuclear opera trust. "Tritium is one of the most benign of radioactive..."

read more...

In Historic Vote, Vermont Poised to Shut Down Lone Nuclear Reac