

Hundreds flee in Japan after Shinmoedake volcano begins spewing ash, boulders

By Helen Kennedy

DAILY NEWS STAFF WRITER

APShinmoedake Volcano, seen here in a file photo, added to Japan's problems on Sunday.

Earthquake, tsunami, nuclear plant meltdowns -- as if the people of Japan didn't have enough to cope with, a volcano began erupting Sunday.

Hundreds of people were forced to flee when the Shinmoedake volcano on the southern island of Kyushu began spewing ash and boulders.

into the sky.

Shinmoedake, one of several volcanic peaks in the Kirishima mountain range, is 950 miles from the epicenter of Friday's earthquake and scientists weren't sure if the quake triggered the eruption.

Eruptions and quakes are common in Japan's "ring of fire."

The volcano erupted in January - the first major seismic activity on the mountain in 52 years. Scientists say lava had been building up in recent weeks.

Shinmoedake is famous for standing in as the villain's secret rocket base in the 1967 James Bond film, "You Only Live Twice."

Advertisement

DEAL OF THE DAY
Visit NYDailyNews.com/deals for savings up to 90%

Print Powered By  FormatDynamics™