Most Viewed RSS Feed »

Top House Republican tells Navy to scrap its ‘fantasy’ shipbuilding plan - The Hill - cov...

Top House Republican tells Navy to scrap its ‘fantasy’ shipbuilding plan
By Carlo Muñoz - 05/21/13 07:31 PM ET

A top House Republican is demanding that the Navy face up to fiscal realities by overhauling its shipbuilding plan.

Rep. Randy Forbes (R-Va.), the chairman of the House Armed Services seapower subcommittee, said the Navy is living in a “fantasy land” by putting forward a 30-year shipbuilding plan when the service can’t guarantee funding beyond five years.

That puts Forbes at odds with senior Navy officials who are trying to map out what their fleet will look like over the next three decades.

His rewrite of the shipbuilding plan was included in the subcommittee’s markup of the Navy’s fiscal 2014 budget plan that was issued Tuesday.

The proposal will force the Navy to make its 30-year shipbuilding plan “a little more realistic … instead of the fictional document” it was when it was submitted in the 2014 budget request, Forbes told The Hill in an interview on Tuesday.

Both sides need to figure out “realistically, what are we doing with the Navy” for future conflicts, he said.

The Virginia Republican, however, could face strong opposition from the sea service over concerns the rewrite might result in the Navy getting fewer ships.

The Navy’s shipbuilding strategy would have the fleet top out at 300 warships over the life of the plan. Anything less than that would prevent the Navy from carrying out critical defense and national security missions across the globe, service officials say.

Asked whether his legislation would force the Navy into a worst-case scenario, Forbes replied: “I would call it a realistic scenario.”

Navy officials declined to comment on the Forbes language, saying the proposal has yet to make it into the final version of the fiscal 2014 defense spending bill.

The call for a change in strategy appears to be a shift for Forbes, who had been calling for significant increases in Navy shipbuilding that would have bumped spending to levels last seen in the mid-1980s.

But he said his legislation is not a reversal because the “realistic scenario” could be dire enough to pry loose more shipbuilding dollars from Congress in future fiscal years.

Boosting Navy spending on ships “will not happen in two weeks or two months … [because] it has a number of components” that will take several budget cycles to make work, according to Forbes.

MORE FROM THE WEB

• Rep. Peter King: Fears of ‘Enormous’ Attack
• Priebus Warns NBC, CNN: Pull Hillary Projects or Else
• Newsmax Magazine Wins Four Charlie Awards
• Is Obama Telling the Truth on IRS, Benghazi Scandals
• Obama’s Budget Takes Aim at Retired Americans
But the differences between how much the Navy now expects to spend to make the plan a reality, and what it has asked Congress to provide for the plan, essentially makes the current Navy ship plan a "fantasy land," Forbes said.

Navy leaders plan to spend roughly $16 billion per year over the next five years to build up to the 300-ship force, according to service estimates.

That spending number falls in line with Navy spending levels for shipbuilding from previous fiscal years.

But recent analysis by the Navy and Congressional Budget Office claims the sea service will actually need between $160 billion and $220 billion annually to hit a 300-ship fleet over the next three decades.

The Navy cannot "place a lot of fidelity in the long term" on the success of the shipbuilding plan, service acquisition chief Sean Stackley told the House Appropriations Defense subcommittee in April.

Forbes said forcing the Navy to bring its ship plan in line with its $16 billion per year spending estimates will provide a more accurate picture of where the force is and where it needs to go.

"We cannot run the U.S. Navy on fantasy [numbers]."

The Navy will field a total of 66 submarines, 11 aircraft carriers and 32 amphibious landing ships as part of the shipbuilding plan.

Those vessels would be supported by 145 large and small multimission warships, including the littoral combat ship.

The submarine force will include a mix of ballistic and cruise missile subs, including the new nuclear-powered Virginia-class boat and the Ohio-class replacement submarine, dubbed the SSBN-X.
Top House Republican tells Navy to scrap its ‘fantasy’ shipbuilding plan - The Hill - cover...

Lobbying World

Pandora taps tech policy warrior

Senate measure renews fight over reparations for Holocaust survivors

Akin Gump adds Holder advisor to ‘crown jewel’ practice

Immigration lobby prepares to camp out in Republican districts over recess

PhRMA comes out on top in trade group rankings

The Gun Lobby is About to Face a Gun-Control Organization as Tough and Well-Funded as the NRA. Here's What the Fight Will Look Like. (New Republic)

10 Cheapest Places to Live in America (Kiplinger)

10 Insanely Overpaid Public Employees (The Fiscal Times)

10 Reasons Why Obama Won’t Touch Your 529 (Savingforcollege.com)

6 Fabulous Foods to Fight High Blood Pressure (AARP)

The Navy's role is not to protect the American people, but rather to protect the sea lanes so that multinational corporations can continue to outsource US jobs and engage in labor & regulation arbitrage.

Why can't the Navy get the money they need from companies like Apple - instead of shaking down financially stressed people?

GOV state chairmen endorse Priebus call for networks to drop Clinton projects

Samantha Power joins Twitter

HILLICON VALLEY

’Traitor’ edit on Snowden’s Wikipedia page linked to Senate IP address

Amazon.com founder Jeff Bezos buys the Washington Post

Time Warner proposal would let customers drop CBS

More Hillicon Valley »

E²-WIRE (ENERGY)

OVERNIGHT ENERGY: See you in September!

Social cost of carbon’ draws coal, oil industry lobbying

K Street powerhouse lobbies for green energy tax bill

More E²-Wire (Energy) »

BALLOT BOX

Ex-Rep. Jeb Bradley: ‘Rumors are true’ on Senate run

DCCC hits House Republicans for going on recess

Another Democrat passes on Montana Senate race, deepening party’s dilemma

More Ballot Box »

ON THE MONEY

Obama pivots to housing market in Phoenix visit

GOP congressman: Tanning tax racist

Fewer teens working this summer compared to 2012

More On The Money »

HEALTHWATCH

Sebelius pans ObamaCare ‘rate shock’ predictions

Sebelius: Conservative group efforts to fight ObamaCare enrollment ‘dismal’

Employers urge more clarity on ObamaCare mandate delay

More Healthwatch »

FLOOR ACTION

Senate bill penalizes transporting horses in double-decker trailers

House resolution says no action on immigration until border is secured

More Floor Action »

TRANSPORTATION

House GOP readies bill to boost waterways for September

Democrat: Transportation bill unraveled in House because of Amtrak cut

Obama reappoints NTSB chief

More Transportation »

DEFCON HILL

Resurgent al Qaeda casts doubt on Obama’s national security record

Taliban, Afghanistan look to kick start peace talks

Report: US special forces  on alert to strike al Qaeda targets

More DEFCON Hill »

BubbaLama • 3 months ago

Millions wasted on ‘green fuel experiments in the past 2 years. This green bunkering fouled engines and reduced performance. Plus the ultra costly biocrap was pumped ashore - fine shipyard that factors cost overruns as profit.

NathanNV • 3 months ago

Every Surface ship in World that squawks or talks or looks US Navy could be destroyed in about 4 seconds by either Missile, or torpedo. Their are no counter measures for a first strike in surface warfare.

Dr. Billy Kidd • 2 months ago

Actually, there are flak guns on ships surrounding aircraft carriers. They blast shrapnel at incoming missiles. It works if the crew is awake, had their coffee, and are on stand by. They probably have to lose a ship before that happens.

TE • 3 months ago

The Navy's role is not to protect the American people, but rather to protect the sea lanes so that multinational corporations can continue to outsource US jobs and engage in labor & regulation arbitrage.

Why can't the Navy get the money they need from companies like Apple - instead of shaking down financially stressed people?

LEAVE A MESSAGE...
GLOBAL AFFAIRS
- Terror threat leads State to extend 19
embassy closings
- McCain and Graham to push for democracy
during Egypt trip
- White House spokesman: US willing to work with new Iranian government

More Global Affairs »

IN THE KNOW
- Roby reveals 4-year-old behind Wreck-it-
Ralph tweet
- Rep. Doyle enters his 60s 25 lbs. lighter
- Favorite political target among late-night
comedians: Obama

More In The Know »

REGWATCH
- Oil industry huddled with administration to protest renewable fuel standard
- Court ruling on trucking regs roils safety advocates
- EPA relaxes deadline for gas storage tank
standards

More RegWatch »

COLUMNS
Juan Williams
GOP dead end

A.B. Stoddard
A divided GOP will fall

More Columnists »

Get latest news from The Hill direct to your inbox, RSS reader and mobile devices.
Enter Email Address
SIGN UP »