

The Huffington Post

Andy Borowitz

BorowitzReport.com

Posted: April 30, 2010 01:25 PM

Goldman Sachs Reveals it Shorted Gulf of Mexico

Read More: Borowitz Report , Fabrice Tourre , Goldman Sachs , Gulf Of Mexico , Lindsay Lohan , Oil Spill , Oil Spill Gulf Of Mexico 2010 , Comedy News

Get Comedy Alerts

NEW YORK (The Borowitz Report) - In what is looming as another public relations predicament for Goldman Sachs, the banking giant admitted today that it made "a substantial financial bet against the Gulf of Mexico" one day before the sinking of an oil rig in that body of water.

The new revelations came to light after government investigators turned up new emails from Goldman employee Fabrice "Fabulous Fab" Tourre in which he bragged to a girlfriend that the firm was taking a "big short" position on the Gulf.

"One oil rig goes down and we're going to be rolling in dough," Mr. Tourre wrote in one email. "Suck it, fishies and birdies!"

The news about Goldman's bet against the Gulf comes on the heels of embarrassing revelations that the firm had taken a short position on Lindsay Lohan's acting career.